Vancouver is hosting its 18th annual breast cancer fundraiser and awareness run this Sunday morning. Signy Wilson, a cancer survivor herself, is running for a friend diagnosed with the disease earlier this week. Story, page 2.

Rooftop park floated for library

- The prominent landscape architect who designed the green roof atop Vancouver's iconic central library wants to create a publicly accessible rooftop park
- The library will approach city council next week to begin planning its expansion

Renowned landscape architect Cornelia Hahn Oberlander hopes the green roof atop the Vancouver Public Library will be converted into a spectacular rooftop park for everyone in the city to enjoy.

The top two floors of the central library are currently leased to the B.C. Building Corporation and have been closed to the public since the building's 1995 opening.

That lease, however, expires in 2015 and the library wants to begin expansion plans that include creating an accessible green space on the building's roof.

"It will be a sitting area and a beautiful place to view the city for everybody," said Oberlander, who won the library's original design competition in the early 1990s with architect Moshe Safdie. "It will be a park on top of the roof — how about that?"

Oberlander says she's just dreaming at this point, but envisions a small amphitheatre, a trellis wall and sitting areas.

Central library director Shelagh Flaherty said people remember Oberlander's original design and often ask if they can go up to the roof. ● JEFF HODSON

Olympic Village loan due

Vancouver has notified Olympic Village builder Millennium that its $561-million construction loan is now "due and payable" after the developer fell $8 million short of the $200-million scheduled payment due at the end of August.

The city has asked Millennium for a refreshed marketing plan for the village and details of how it plans to pay down the loan.

To date, 259 of 737 market units have sold, with the majority going prior to the Olympics.

Only 36 units have been sold since sales re-opened in mid-May. The developer's next scheduled payment of $75 million is due the beginning of January.

Mayor Gregor Robertson blamed a soft housing market and the HST for the sluggish sales.

He said the village's high-end units (almost 30 per cent of the unsold units are priced at more than $2 million) are particularly hard to move.

He said the city had taken over the lead on the 252 units of mixed-market rental and social housing and would select the operators and possibly even manage one of the buildings itself.

City has been hosting cancer fundraiser since 1993 CBCF hopes to end breast cancer by 2020

SARAH N. FITZGERALD
VANCOUVER@METRONEWS.CA

Years after being diagnosed with breast cancer, Signy Wilson and Brandy Worrall are running toward a breast-cancer-free future.

On Sunday, the Vancouver women will join tens of thousands across Canada when they participate in the 19th annual Canadian Breast Cancer Foundation CIBC Run for the Cure.

Worrall, who's been in remission for two years, is running for herself and her two children.

"I really don't want my children to go through it, but I'm realistic," she said.

"It's something they're going to have to go through if medical research doesn't accelerate."

The Run is Canada's largest single-day, volunteer-led event.

"It's just such an important cause because it's raising money," added Wilson.

Details

Vancouver's run starts at 9:30 a.m. at Concord Pacific Place, 1095 Pender St.

Murder victim laid to rest

A popular teenager murdered in a daytime attack at a North Delta park was laid to rest this week in a private family ceremony that was also attended by Hells Angels.

Delta Police Sgt. Sharlene Brooks confirmed at a news conference on Thursday Hells Angels were at the funeral to support Laura Szendrei's father.

Brooks appeared uncomfortable with the question and refused to elaborate or say whether police are investigating any connection between the Hells Angels and the death.

She added police have received more than 150 tips but that investigators are still hoping more people come forward.

Szendrei, 15, was on her way to meet some friends last Saturday when she was attacked in a wooded area of the park. She died the following day.

If she had lived in this country, she may have been the subject of an episode of Hoarders — but instead, Zhao Xiang Yuan's monumental collection of possessions is the subject of the Vancouver Art Gallery's newest exhibit.

Waste Not, which opens on Saturday, displays 10,000 everyday items collected over a lifetime by one Chinese woman.

The clothes, books, kitchen utensils, toiletries and shopping bags — among other things — were gathered and organized by Yuan and her son Song Dong, one of China's most renowned contemporary artists.

"Before the (exhibit) she didn't know how much stuff she had," Song said.

"She (saw it laid out and) said, 'This is too much stuff.'"

Song said it was the Chinese virtue of frugality started his mother's accumulation of goods, which was compounded when his father died and she fell into a deep depression.

"I wanted to show her life and give her a goal," he said.

"My mother said this (project) gave her a second life."

Have the B.C. contestants bonded because of where they're from?

Danielle:
"We feel privileged we're all from the same place. (When the show is over) I plan on seeing them, hopefully every day."
Charlene:
"We're not fighting each other for those (Vancouver) votes. We want all of us to go (through)."
Nathalie:
"There's a bond. We're all very close (and are) ... super proud to represent Vancouver and B.C."

How important is for you to make the Top 10?

Danielle: "It's been a goal of mine for a few years to even be on the show, but to make the Top 10 would be life-changing."
Charlene:
"Your end goal is to be the last person standing but there's so much that goes along with Top 10, you go on tour and you get to relive some of these amazing numbers."

BCCLA accuses Mounties of abuse

The B.C. Civil Liberties Association says three cellblock videos from the RCMP's detachment in Williams Lake show Mounties abusing First Nations inmates.

Group spokesman Robert Holmes says the detachment also did not apparently investigate a business owner's complaint about racism and cut off a media outlet that tried to report on problems involving police treatment of aboriginal people.

RCMP Sgt. Rob Vermeulen says the public should reserve judgment before they know the full story and that using force is sometimes a reality of police work.

Four-year mayoral terms voted down

After long and heated debate, municipal politicians representing their communities at the Union of B.C. Municipalities convention voted 354 to 280 that mayors' terms should not be extended to four years.

The proposal to prolong the current three-year term was intended to help decrease election costs, and to give politicians more time to implement their plans. It apparently pitted some politicians from smaller communities against those from larger communities.

Municipal politicians eventually rejected the four-year term largely on the basis that it would discourage people from running for office in smaller communities. STEPHANIE ORFORD

MAYOR SHOCKED

Drinking charge ousts top cop

A Quebec City suburb has temporarily lost its police chief because he has been busted on drinking and driving charges.

The top cop in Lévis, Que., Jean-Francois Roy, was stopped while driving downtown and he allegedly failed a breathalyzer test.

The 55-year-old chief has been temporarily suspended from his duties and is being replaced by his deputy.

The suburb's mayor held a news conference on Thursday to express her administration's dismay. "It's a shock," said Danielle Roy-Marinelli.

"This isn't something we like. It's unacceptable for a police chief to be in a situation like this.

"Because, naturally, a police chief is a powerful symbol in a community. He assures the safety of citizens. So the entire police service is in shock, too."

One report said the arrest happened after a citizen noticed someone driving erratically.

Secret sex video leads to tragedy

The death of a Rutgers University freshman has stirred outrage and remorse among classmates.

They say they wished they could have stopped the teen from jumping off a bridge after a secret video of his sexual encounter with a man was streamed online.

Tyler Clementi, 18, jumped off the George Washington Bridge into the Hudson River.

His body was identified Thursday after being found in the river a day before.

"Had he been in bed with a woman, this would not have happened," said Rutgers student Lauren Felton, 21.

Clementi's roommate, Dharun Ravi, and fellow Rutgers freshman Molly Wei, both 18, have been charged with invading Clementi's privacy.

Prosecutors say they used a webcam to surreptitiously transmit a live image of Clementi having sex Sept. 19 and that Ravi tried to webcast a second encounter on Sept. 21, the day before Clementi's suicide.

French bank probe looks at Canadians

- Ottawa has list based on information from bank whistleblower
- Investigators looking into tax evasion using Swiss HSBC accounts

The federal government has obtained a list of nearly 1,800 offshore bank accounts belonging to Canadians that turned up during an international probe into possible tax evasion, CBC News and the Globe and Mail say.

The accounts at HSBC Private Bank in Geneva are part of a larger list of about 80,000 accounts that a former bank IT security specialist passed on to French investigators, the joint CBC News/Globe and Mail investigation suggests.

Herve Falciani, the whistleblower, claimed he was worried that criminals and tax cheats were using the bank to hide money and began copying private account information in 2006 after his bosses refused to become more transparent about their banking practices.

A spokeswoman for the Ministry of National Revenue says the Canada Revenue Agency has a list of individuals who may be exploiting offshore accounts, is assessing the names on a case-by-case basis and will take "aggressive action to recover money owed to Canadians."

HSBC, which has not been accused of any wrongdoing, says it "in no way condones tax evasion and is co-operating with authorities while protecting the rights of our clients to confidentiality."

It is not clear exactly how much money Canadians are holding in the HSBC accounts, nor is it known how many individual Canadians hold the 1,785 Canadian accounts.

HSBC says the bank and its clients are the victims of a criminal act — a theft by a former employee that involves about 15,000 existing clients worldwide.

CBC and the Globe say Falciani was fired by HSBC after being accused of trying to sell the account information to foreign governments.

Swiss authorities confronted him about that allegation and brought him in for a day of interrogation. They asked him to return the next day, but he never did. Instead, Falciani fled to France.

An Indian court ruled Thursday that a disputed holy site that sparked bloody riots in the past should now be divided between the Hindu and Muslim communities. Tethered teen sparks concern

British Columbia's children's representative says she'll look for ways to help police deal with intoxicated minors following an adjudicator's ruling that such situations can put officers in a bind if a social worker isn't immediately available.

Mary Ellen Turpel-Lafond plans to ask for a meeting with police and the province's Ministry of Children and Family Development after the adjudicator's ruling in the case of Willow Kinloch.

Kinloch was 15 when she was arrested in Victoria in 2005 for public drunkenness. Her case rose to national prominence after video showed the teen tethered for hours to a jail cell door.

A public hearing was ordered by B.C.'s Office of the Police Complaint Commissioner and the adjudicator earlier this week called for written reprimands against the two Victoria police officers involved in the case.

But retired judge Alan Filmer also urged provincial officials, including Turpel-Lafond, to do more so police officers aren't left babysitting drunken minors.

Google blacklists naughty words in an Instant

- Online giant rolling out instant search results
- Now you can guess 'Google blacklist' of bad words

Google Instant is being rolled out across the country and before long Canadians will be able to play the game that hackers are indulging in: Guess Google's blacklist.

Google Instant is a new feature that spits out search results while a user is typing, without the need to click the Search button.

It was launched earlier this month on Google.com and as of Wednesday, started appearing on Google.ca for some users.

But there are certain words that Google won't help users spell.

A publication aimed at hackers called 2600 Magazine has already compiled a list of such words. It's several hundred entries long.

Some seem innocuous but could lead to adult pages, like "amateur," while others are blocked because they're associated with hate speech or other offensive content.

Although some have claimed that Google Instant's list of bad words is a form of censorship, users can still search for the subjects by typing them in themselves.

Google Instant's product manager, Toronto native Jonathan Effrat, said the list of words isn't new and is based on search data that points to objectionable content. He noted there are cases in which some words are blocked without merit.

"It's really an imperfect science in some ways," Effrat admitted. "There are a lot of ways in which it continues to evolve and we'll continue to make it better over time."

Jean pens farewell letter

Departing Gov. Gen. Michaëlle Jean has written an open thank-you letter to Canadians, covering many of the highs and lows of her tenure, but making only passing reference to her handling of the prorogation crisis of 2008.

Yet, she says that was a moment that likely made people question Canada's entire political system.

The letter follows an interview she gave The Canadian Press earlier this week in which she said she took her time before granting Prime Minister Stephen Harper's request to prorogue Parliament because she wanted to emphasize that the decision deserved thought.

CORRUPTION'S UPSIDE

Other people's money

DAVID DESCÔTEAUX

Quebec's politicians deserve a Darwin Award.

Stuck in traffic with a pressing need to urinate, a man gets out of his car and walks toward the low concrete wall, then jumps over it to get some privacy. No luck. His car wasn't on the road — it was on a bridge.

Sixty feet below, the man lost his life. But he won an honour: A Darwin Award. Given posthumously (and humorously) to those who help humanity by removing themselves from the gene pool.

The Darwin Awards come to mind when I think of Jean Charest and Quebec politicians — especially when I reflect on the incestuous relationship between politicians and construction companies, the political appointment of judges, the illegal financing of municipal parties, etc.

And, of course, when looking at the cover of this week's Maclean's, calling Quebec "the most corrupt province in Canada."

Some say Charest, Quebec's premier, will never recover from these scandals. If so, his political death might help humanity — by enhancing not the politicians' gene pool (quite a challenge) but, rather, the voters'.

In particular, the shameful displays of crony capitalism occurring every day in La Belle Province illustrate the correlation between the size of government and corruption.

Corruption occurs when politicians spend other people's money.

The more areas the state meddles in, the more numerous the opportunities for corruption. It's a mathematical rule. When government distributes licences, contracts and grants, people have an incentive to use bribes in order to obtain licences, contracts or grants. It's true in Quebec and it's true elsewhere in Canada.

Studies by the OECD, the World Bank and numerous scholars have clearly documented this relationship. It seems obvious, yet we ignore it.

I give the 2010 Darwin Award to the Quebec politicians whose careers will perish from these scandals. Their blatant disrespect for taxpayers should help wake us up.

David Descôteaux is a freelance economic journalist and an associate researcher at the Montreal Economic Institute (iedm.org).

Recovery in retreat

The economy shrank for the first time in almost a year in July, a stark signal that Canadians are facing a long and hard climb-back from recession.

Statistics Canada reported Thursday the country's gross domestic product — the broadest measure of economic health — fell 0.1 per cent in July from June after 11 months of steady growth.

TORIES PULL BACK ON EI PREMIUM HIKE

Business groups are welcoming the Harper government's partial retreat on an employment insurance premium hike, but critics say the Conservatives should have done a full withdrawal.

Finance Minister Jim Flaherty announced Thursday that premiums will rise by five cents for each $100 of insurable earnings Jan. 1.

The original plan was for a 15-cent jump.

He also said the government will limit future increases to a maximum of 10 cents for each $100 of insurable earnings.

5 MINUTES WITH: ERIN KARPLUK

Season 3 of CBC's hit dramedy Being Erica kicked off this week with new characters and a new series of blunders for protagonist Erica Strange to relive. The one-hour program airs Tuesdays. Metro caught up with the show's star, Erin Karpluk, while she was back in Vancouver this week.

To what do you attribute the success of the show?
It's very unique. It's like if Ally McBeal and Lost got drunk and had a love child. I'm very proud of the fact that it's Canadian. It has the theme of regret and everyone has regrets, so to see this (character) battling awkward moments, people can relate to that. It's not formulaic and (issues) don't get tied up at the end of every episode. It's very messy, like life.

Are you privy to the plot a few episodes ahead of time, or is each script a surprise?
I want the plot to be a surprise. I just deal with one (episode) at a time.

What can viewers expect from this new season of Being Erica?
This season's theme is about transition. Erica is as evolved as she's ever been. We introduce the element of group therapy with Adam's character and they develop a strong connection and challenge each other. There are new characters including a new doctor played by Graham Greene. It's the same show, we just go deeper and start exploring the other characters.

What have you learned about yourself from playing Erica?
I've learned a lot from her, to let a lot of things go, because certainly Erica has to. She's extremely flawed but I like her resilience and that inspires me. I feel lucky to play a character that's so three-dimensional.

You used to live in Vancouver and still consider the city your home. What do you miss most about it?
I miss my friends, going to Abigail's Party for brunch, running at Jericho and Spanish Banks, doing yoga at Kits Point, Stanley Park. But I'm falling in love with Toronto. Both cities offer different things. I'm lucky to be able to live in both.

Worth mentioning

Some ancient penguins may have been twice as big as today's Emperor penguin but they lacked the dashing tuxedo, or dinner jacket.

Researchers unearthed remains of a nearly five-foot-tall (1.5-metre) penguin that roamed what is now Peru about 36 million years ago, and also discovered fossilized feathers that show back then, the flightless bird was a more motley mix of reddish-brown and grey.

Thursday's report in the journal Science is more than a curiosity about colour. Analyzing the fossil led to a new discovery about modern penguins, which in turn raises questions about how their feathers evolved to help them become such expert swimmers.

It's one of the largest penguins that ever lived, estimated to have been twice as heavy as the average Emperor penguin of today. The second species of giant penguin discovered in Peru is part of a cluster of now-extinct penguin species that apparently ranged over much of the Southern Hemisphere.

A stroke of luck helped paleontologists find the feathers. A student on the dig team discovered the fossil's foot and noticed it had scales, evidence of soft tissue that's rarely preserved.

Metro Minute with Fubar II

"Turn up the good, turn down the suck," and go see Fubar II, which opens locally in theatres Friday.

The long-awaited sequel to the 2002 cult film Fubar makes its way to Vancouver after premiering at the Toronto International Film Festival.

Apparently, the mock documentary-style film stays true to form, following the lives of two aging metalheads from Alberta, Terry and Deaner.

We catch up with the anti-heroes five years after Dean's battle with prostate cancer as the two head north from Calgary to make some sweet cash working in the oilsands of Fort McMurray, Alta. (The Mac).

WHAT DO YOU THINK OF A POSSIBLE MINIMUM-WAGE HIKE FOR B.C.?

Manu Gill
VANCOUVER
I think it's a long time overdue. It's pretty hard to live off of eight bucks an hour. They should probably raise it more ... I think it should be at least $12.

Caitlin Dodd
VANCOUVER
I am a very strong proponent of the $15 minimum wage. There are a lot of working families out there and single moms that very much need a raise in minimum wage.

No on-screen chemistry was needed for Heigl and Duhamel ◐ Characters thrust into parenthood together despite a true dislike for each other after mutual friends' tragic death ◐ Life As We Know It shows the difficulties of marriages and parenting

▶ Katherine Heigl and Josh Duhamel star in Life As We Know It, which comes out next Friday.

An unwanted partnership

STEVE GOW
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

[illegible],
Katherine Heigl and Josh Duhamel struck some solid on-screen chemistry by playing two characters that really, really hate each other.

"Yeah, these people really don't like each other," laughed Heigl during a recent interview in New York to promote the romantic dramedy. "He kind of enjoys needling her and sticking it to her."

"I don't think we put any pressure on each other to have chemistry," added Duhamel who insists the characters simply work best when they're at their worst. "We really didn't like each other. It was real … that was the whole mentality."

Opening next Friday, Life As We Know It casts Heigl and Duhamel as two polar opposites who must overcome their animosity for each other when they assume guardianship over an orphaned toddler after the tragic death of their mutual friends.

"I thought it was an interesting dynamic," said Heigl.

"Regardless of this bickering thing they have going, they are there for each other because they unite in this crap that they're going through."

The movie certainly rests on the question of whether these rivals will fall for each other through parental pursuits. However, for the two stars (who are each married in real life — Heigl to musician Josh Kelley, Duhamel to Black Eyed Peas' Fergie), the film also redeems the sacrifice that comes with marriage.

"Marriage can be a big old pain in the butt on many occasions but I really like my guy and I wouldn't want to live life without him," said Heigl.

"There is something about having a partner in life on your side even when you're wrong. That's kind of amazing to have."

Marriage advice

For married folks that are lamenting their single life, Katherine Heigl has some advice: "If it's a good relationship and its (your) true companion," said the actress. "Seriously spend a full day just doing everything in your life as you would without that person and you will miss them."

Malkovich stays busy

Actor stars in Jonah Hex, Secretariat and Red this year alone ◐ A new Dangerous Liaisons is in the works, as thespian goes behind the lens again

NED EHRBAR
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA
METRO WORLD NEWS IN LOS ANGELES

When audiences first meet John Malkovich's irascible French Canadian horse trainer Lucien Laurin in Secretariat, he's failing miserably at golf and spitting French put-downs. It's the latest in a line of delightfully aggressive turns from the veteran Malkovich, who also hits theatres this month with Red. Metro sat down with Malkovich at the Santa Anita racetrack to discuss choosing roles, directing theatre versus directing movies and how to look like a bad golfer on screen.

How is your actual golf game?
I never really played golf. My best friend growing up was always playing golf. I went out, I think, maybe once or twice and smacked it around a little bit. I never tried, you know?

▶ John Malkovich and Diane Lane star in Secretariat.

So you didn't have to try too hard to play poorly?
Actually, (Secretariat's director) Randall (Wallace) kept saying the shots looked too good, so I fixed him up with some bad shots. I did one shot that was fantastic. I put out five balls on the tee and was able to hit one, which ricocheted and did another ricochet and hit the cameraman. Spectacular shot. I was like, "Take that!"

You've got an eclectic mix of roles this year, with Secretariat, Jonah Hex and Red. How much do you plan ahead what types of roles you'll take on?
Honestly, I don't over-worry the notion of roles. I try to worry about can this film be good? Jonah Hex could have been good. It didn't turn out to be at all, but it wasn't gone into with any sort of cynicism. I've done films where the role is fantastic, like Color Me Kubrick, but if the film is not a really good film, it doesn't matter. You may as well have not done it.

Do you have any more directing projects in mind?
The next thing I direct will be a new translation and adaptation of Dangerous Liaisons, of Les Liaisons Dangereuses, in Paris. I still direct a lot for the stage. I love directing movies, but I don't want to goof around eight years to get it made, you know? If I want to do a play, I just do it, and it's done. It's a waste of time to spend years trying to get something on that should be perfectly simple to get on. But that's movies, and I get all that aggro as a producer. You get your kicking producing. I don't need it directing also. If something comes along and I feel like it, great.

Movie review

See it twice

A perfect pairing

The Social Network
Genre: Drama
Directors: David Fincher
Stars: Jesse Eisenberg, Andrew Garfield, Justin Timberlake

Facebook: The Movie was a depressing inevitability, but fortunately the project found the most unlikely and perfect set of collaborators in the dialogue dependent West Wing scribe Aaron Sorkin and director David Fincher (Se7en). Together they've created a portrait of Facebook creator Mark Zuckerberg that presents him as a tragic success story: a mid-20s computer genius who created the massively successful social networking site despite being socially incompetent.

It's an ingenious piece of irony that positions Zuckerberg as a poster boy for a generation that lives robust social lives online without really knowing how to interact in person.

The Social Network uses two legal proceedings in which Zuckerberg is sued by former partners as a framing device and was based on source material derived from interviews with those he burned. As such it can't be taken as gospel, but the few awkward damage control interviews that Zuckerberg has done to defend himself recently suggest the overall portrayal isn't that far off. Fortunately, the level of truth doesn't really matter as the film is primarily a layered and surprisingly hilarious character study that represents Sorkin's best writing, Fincher's most subdued filmmaking, and the most nuanced neurotic performance yet from the underrated Jesse Eisenberg.

You Will Meet A Tall Dark Stranger
Genre: Comedy/Romance
Director: Woody Allen
Stars: Naomi Watts, Josh Brolin, Anthony Hopkins

For me the beginning of any Woody Allen movie is like a warm hug. The familiar font, jaunty jazz theme and alphabetized credits are an important part of my movie going lexicon as are Allen's familiar themes concerning fate, sex, love and death. He has essayed these subjects before and revisits them again in You Will Meet a Tall Dark Stranger. It's a mix of light comedy and satire buoyed by great performances.

Fubar II
Genre: Comedy
Director: Michael Dowse
Stars: Paul Spence, Dave Lawrence
●●●●
It's been eight years since headbangers Terry and Dean were given'r in Fubar but the Alberta boys haven't lost any of their lust for life. In this sequel, the boys celebrate Dean's remission from cancer by getting jobs in the oil patch where the inseparable buddies' relationship is soon strained by a girlfriend, Dean's attempts to collect workers' compensation and loads of property damage. It's clear the boys have a bigger budget but they manage to keep the authentic tone of the original. ● STEVE GOW

Buried
Genre: Thriller
Director: Rodrigo Cortés
Stars: Ryan Reynolds
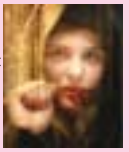
Buried begins with a Blair Witch close-up — all eyes and nose — of star Ryan Reynolds. We learn he is a civilian truck driver in Iraq who was taken hostage, buried underground with a cellphone, who will be left to die unless a ransom is paid. Bleak and claustrophobic, Buried feels like one idea stretched to feature length despite inventive work from director Rodrigo Cortes and a revelatory central performance from Reynolds. ● RICHARD CROUSE



Let Me In
Genre: Horror
Director: Matt Reeves
Stars: Chloe Moretz Kodi Smit-McPhee
Let Me In, a remake of the much loved Swedish film Let the Right One In, is a story about two pre-teens excluded from general society — one by bullies, the other because she's a vampire. Save for its setting the film is respectful to its source in all ways but one. In the American version Chloe Moretz plays her as much more vulnerable which separates it from the original, but is a less effective. ● RICHARD CROUSE

If you grew up watching David Suzuki on The Nature of Things, Canada's environmental icon may seem like an otherworldly grandfather. Director Sturla Gunnarsson's Force of Nature amounts to half-lecture/half-biography and all simply fascinating. Whether it's Suzuki's reminiscence of internment during the Second World War or his affinity for the Haida culture. ● STEVE GOW

StreetDance 3-D
Genre: Drama
Directors: Max Giwa and Dania Pasquini
Stars: Nichola Burley, Richard Winsor, Charlotte Rampling
This week's film about a struggling street dance team forced to join forces with ballet students is British and in 3-D. In theory that makes it different than all the other You Got Served-style movies out there, but sadly there's nothing even moderately original about this movie. The screenplay is little more than a collection of clichés. ● PHIL BROWN

This weekend the story of a 12-year-old vampire who helps her young neighbour deal with bullies at school hits theatres. Sound familiar? It should, the movie is an American remake of a Swedish art house hit from less than twelve months ago. Let Me In, the English language remounting of Låt den rätte komma in, joins a long list of movies to paste an American stamp on its cinematic passport.

▶ The Departed was a remake of the Hong Kong film Infernal Affairs.

Let Me In is earning good reviews for its respectful treatment of the source material but that is not always the case. Critic Tom O'Neil warned, "Chances are, with the remake, Hollywood is just serving up re-fried beans that aren't very tasty."

Re-hashes like Weekend at Bernie's, which was loosely based on the Indian cult classic Jane Bhi Do Yaaron and the Thai film Bangkok Dangerous, which won the 2000 Toronto International Film Festival international critics' Award only to be retooled as a big budget, small-brained Nic Cage movie, have left a bad taste in viewer's mouths but not all remakes are unpalatable.

The Departed, the Irish Mafia movie that gave Martin Scorsese his long deserved Best Director Oscar, was based on the Hong Kong film Infernal Affairs. Critics loved Scorsese's film, giving it a 93 per cent fresh rating on Rotten Tomatoes, although Infernal Affairs star Andy Lau grumbled, "The Departed was too long," and Andrew Lau, the original's co-director said, "of course I think the version I made is better but the Hollywood version is pretty good too."

Also pretty good is Insomnia, Christopher Nolan's 2002 remake of a 1997 Norwegian film of the same name. Directed by Erik Skjoldbjærg, the original's story of a disgraced Swedish detective, played by Stellan Skarsgård, who struggles to solve a brutal murder case in northern Norway is a gritty psychological drama which writer Peter Cowie said "represents European cinema at its most challenging." The U.S. remake, starring Al Pacino, Robin Williams and Hilary Swank is a much different film. Roger Ebert said, "unlike most remakes, the Nolan Insomnia is not a pale retread, but a re-examination of the material, like a new production of a good play."

These U.S. remakes have always been with us, and regardless of how Let Me In fares at the box office, are unlikely to stop. For better or for worse plans are already underway for an English remake of The Girl with the Dragon Tattoo starring Daniel Craig.

Everyone likes lists. Most lists are designed to keep things organized and on schedule. Others are intended to create debate and discussion. Lists that rank music on some kind of scale of "best-ness" fall firmly into the latter category.

In 2007, CBC arts reporter and music columnist Bob Mercereau created a national debate with his book, The Top 100 Canadian Albums. That list — topped by Neil Young's Harvest — was the result of a survey of 600 DJs, record store people, musicians and music journalists (including me) from across the country.

Now Bob's done it again with The Top 100 Canadian Singles.

"With the first book," he says, "I found that people were thrilled with an all-Canadian look at music. I don't know if it's so much a question of national pride as it is one of fond memories and personal connections to the music. People really reacted to the fact that this was their music, our music.

"I think the reaction to this one will be similar. Plus, this time the stories behind the songs are so fun. I think people will really enjoy reading how Bryan Adams came to write Summer of '69 [I KNEW it!-AC] or the true meaning of A Foot in Cold Water's (Make Me Do) Anything You Want."

I agree wholeheartedly with Bob when he says that Canada has, in general, not done a very good job documenting its music history. "Most pop histories are written with an American or British slant, so [our] stories haven't been repeated as much. I tried to get each musician to dig deep and give us a surprising story that will help you hear the song in a while new light."

Looking though the rankings — I won't spoil anything for you here other than to say Neil Young, The Band nor Anne Murray finished at number one — you'll be amazed at the breadth and scope of our musical heritage. And you'll be surprised at how well (or how poorly) some well-known artists did. Leonard Cohen will feel more vindication over Hallelujah. Not that he needs it, of course.

Sadly, a couple of these songs are unavailable through iTunes or on CD. Can someone please fix that?

The Top 100 Canadian Singles by Bob Mercereau is available now through Goose Lane.

Emo re-Invented

Album evokes pop-punk glory days of Arizona band Jimmy Eat World

Jimmy Eat World know not to let go of a good thing. Having spent the last couple of albums moving into a modern rock territory after sharing the responsibility of popularizing "emo," the Tempe, Arizona band have gone back to their roots.

For their seventh studio album, Invented, Jimmy Eat World reteamed with the man that helped them make both their 1999 classic, Clarity, and 2001's million-selling Bleed American: producer Mark Trombino.

"We have a really great history with Mark," says singer/guitarist Jim Adkins. "We basically cut our first official record with him. Having that kind of history with him, you don't waste your time explaining where you're coming from with an idea."

The band instantly reclicked with Trombino, and soon he began acting like their de facto fifth member. "It's a plus and also makes things a little bit harder, but Mark will invest himself like he wrote the song with whatever he's working on," Adkins says.

He gets really passionate about it and that's good. We all know we're on the same side, to make a song the best it can be."

Invented isn't about to raise the emo tag back from the dead, but it does evoke the band's pop punk glory days with charged choruses and sweeping arrangements.

Oddly enough though, it was born right when they embarked on a tenth anniversary tour of Clarity.

"We were right in the middle of writing Invented," says Adkins. "The tour idea actually came from fans. Message board kids posting, 'You should do this!' It was fun. It's been a good ten years since we sat down and had that band meeting about the Clarity material, so it was interesting."

▶ Tom Adkins says that while writing Invented he chose the photography of Cindy Sherman and Hannah Starkey to inspire him. "Three years ago I started this writing exercise where I was flipping through images of [theirs] and just writing everything I could that came to mind," he explains. "I'd go back to that writing and work on our own music. It just happened that 85 per cent of Invented was spawned from those writing sessions."

U.S. networks are concerned, viewers know it's all about them.

They know certain shows have been imported for them and specially tailored for U.S. tastes. British comedies spawned All in the Family and Sanford and Son in the early 1970s. More recently, Ugly Betty was adapted from a Colombian telenovela. And NBC's The Office was a domestic reimagining of the British original.

Meanwhile, it's no surprise that American series are sold around the world, dubbed or subtitled for each local audience.

U.S. viewers can get a dandy look at such a foreign transplant thanks to cable's BBC America, which is bringing 26 episodes of Law & Order: UK back to the land where the Law & Order TV empire was born.

Premiering Sunday at 10:30 p.m. EDT, with subsequent episodes airing Fridays at 9 p.m. EDT, Law & Order: UK is unmistakably kin to the L&O family.

While the classic Mike Post licks have been swapped out for a different theme, each episode begins with the sonorously voiced, "In the criminal justice system ..." rap. (Though here, it's the crown prosecutors who prosecute offenders.) And - never fear - location cards remain part of the format, along with the accompanying cha-CHUNG sound effect.

New York City plays an integral role in Law & Order, but its British offshoot is set in London.

Each episode has been adapted from the original series, seen on NBC from 1990 through last season. The first L&O: UK hour is based on the script for Cradle to Grave where a baby is found dead, possibly the victim of tenant harassment. It first aired on Law & Order in 1992.

In Britain the imported Law & Order had already been airing when Law & Order: UK debuted last year on the ITV network. The show has since proved a big success, averaging about a one-quarter share of the viewing audience.

"After 'Law & Order' was broadcast there, we made an English version and it turned into a hit, and, lo and behold, it's coming back to the U.S.," said Law & Order creator Dick Wolf. "This is getting pretty close to a perpetual motion machine."

Leader of the Dance

So You Think You Can Dance Canada's producer and warm-up host Josh Hellyer keeps fans on their toes

IAN GORMERLY
SCENE@METRONEWS.CA

What exactly does a "warm-up host" do?

It's a pretty big ordeal. I'm the first one on stage and the last one to go.

My job is to pump up the crowd, make everyone feel welcome and as if they're really part of the show. There are so many kids who come to the show who aren't of age to actually audition.

But this is great chance for them to actually dance on the stage of the show. So I'll just ask the audience, "So who here thinks that they can dance?"

There are all these 13-year-old girls who will come up and are so shy. Then the second the music comes on, they're incredible dancers and just the fiercest beings.

That's what my job entails - finding people in the audience who can help lift the spirits of everyone who is there.

How do you choose who you invite onto the stage?

It just depends on the person. Sometimes they can be enthusiastic, but then sometimes it can be just a shy little person standing in the front of our moshpit area and I look at them and I'm like, "I feel there's something inside of you."

Do these sorts of things happen throughout the taping?

If we're delayed technically or a commercial break is going really long during the taping I just have to pull out all the stops to make sure everybody's feeling energized.

Is it intimidating having celebrities in the audience?

It's always fun for me to pull them up and make them dance and be ridiculous and have a good time. Ben Mulroney's been to the show and he was the absolute best sport. And Seamus O'Regan from Canada AM, whenever he visits we do a waltz.

Fallon, 36, said he's surprised by the success of the skit. "We never know what's going to viral or get picked up, and this one's beyond what we thought it would do," he said Thursday.

Kids' nutrition author Annabel Karmel dishes goods on weaning babies

Bestselling British children's food and nutrition author Annabel Karmel is well aware of the challenges faced by frustrated parents of kids who are difficult eaters — it's been part of her own experience as a mother.

Karmel said her son, Nicholas, was a very fussy eater. The little one wouldn't eat jarred foods, nor would he touch the bland purées Karmel whipped up from recipes she found in books.

Coping with a child unwilling to eat is stressful enough. But experiencing the heartbreaking loss of her first child only served to fuel Karmel's concerns.

Her daughter, Natasha, died at 13 weeks from a viral infection.

"I suppose I felt this vulnerability having lost a child with this child who wouldn't eat," Karmel said.

Karmel tapped into the passion for cooking and started trying out recipes for Nicholas to eat, putting together things he liked — like apple — with things he hated — chicken.

"I suppose I felt this vulnerability having lost a child with this child who wouldn't eat."
ANNABEL KARMEL

She started to give out recipes to other mothers in the playgroup she ran who also were having difficulties with their kids, and said her fellow moms encouraged her to write a book. Karmel saw doing so as a way to honour the legacy of Natasha.

Since the success of her first book, The Complete Baby and Toddler Meal Planner published in 1991, Karmel now has more than 20 to her name. She has been made a Member of the British Empire by the Queen for her work in the area of children's nutrition.

Getting it right

- The book offers passages and photos addressing common questions and concerns about weaning, accompanied by food suggestions and recipes for children transitioning from purées to finger foods.
- The Cordon Bleu-trained chef, and mother to Nicholas, now 22, Lara, 20 and Scarlett, 18, said she wanted to focus on the first year of a child's life which she describes as the "most important year to be able to get it right."

Thumbs down to multi-vits

In 1997, 35,329 women without cancer were enrolled in a Swedish study. They filled out a questionnaire that included information about whether or not they took multivitamins.

During almost 10 years of follow-up, 974 women developed breast cancer.

It turned out that multivitamin use was associated with a statistically significant increased risk of breast cancer.

"The thing about multivitamins is that women use them as a substitute for eating well," says Dr. Janice Wright. "I would rather you eat veggies," she says. CELIA MILNE

Thumbs up to fish oil: U.S. study

A similar study of 35,016 women conducted in Washington state found that women who take fish oil supplements have a lower risk of developing the most common type of breast cancer.

All participants were aged 50 to 76 and were healthy at the start of the study. They filled out questionnaires about their use of supplements.

After six years of follow-up, 880 women developed breast cancer. The risk of developing breast cancer turned out to be 32 per cent lower in women taking fish oil.

Omega-3 fatty acids DHA and EPA are known to reduce inflammation, and there is increasing evidence that cancer is related to inflammation.

Authors suggest that the best way to consume omega-3 fatty acids is by eating fish, rather than through supplements. CELIA MILNE

According to the Canadian Cancer Society, the five-year survival rate for women with breast cancer is quite high, at 87 per cent.

New breast cancer breakthroughs

Leading experts say change is within our grasp Healthy lifestyle can be more powerful for recovery than chemo, radiation: Research shows

CELIA MILNE
@METRONEWS.CA

"There's a revolution in cancer care," says Dr. Janice Wright, director of clinical services at Vancouver's InspireHealth — a cancer care centre that integrates research-based natural approaches with conventional cancer treatment such as chemo and radiation.

Evidence shows that a healthy lifestyle is a powerful force in a positive breast cancer recovery.

Wright explains that most people think all the cells inside a tumour are tumour cells, yet new research reveals that up to 50 per cent of cells inside breast tumours are normal immune cells. These cells, called macrophages, either help the tumour grow or help the body fight cancer.

"We want do to everything we can to turn those macrophages on in a healthy way," she says.

It is possible by our own behaviour to help move these cells into an anti-cancer role by following basic health behaviour: Eating a diet high in omega-3s and low in bad fats and refined sugar; exercising regularly; reducing stress; cutting down on caffeine; cooking with turmeric; drinking green tea once a day; and limiting alcohol intake.

Therapies such as exercise, yoga, proper diet and group discussion used to be considered complementary. "Now we're seeing patients living longer [as a result]," says Wright.

New research shows that the environment in which cancer cells grow has a greater impact on outcome or prognosis than chemotherapy or cancer cells themselves.

"The message is, there are many things you can do to support your immune system," says Wright.

The Statistics

There are many studies on integrated care in breast cancer and InspireHealth is capturing them. Go to.inspirehealth.ca/research/database.

- Approximately 23, 200 Canadian women will be diagnosed with breast cancer in 2010.
- About 5, 300 women will die from the disease this year.
- Breast cancer has become more of a chronic disease than a killer.

Decoding the breast cancer genome

In 2009, doctors at the University of British Columbia accomplished an amazing feat: They decoded all of the three-billion letters in the DNA sequence of a breast cancer tumour.

This research helps to unlock the secrets of how breast cancer grows and spreads. It was considered a landmark study, and was published in the prestigious international journal, Nature.

Dr. Samuel Aparicio and his team, using state-of-the-art technology, studied one patient's lobular metastatic breast cancer tumour over nine years.

They found 32 mutations in the metastatic tumour and then looked to see which ones were present in the original tumour.

Only five of the 32 were present in all the cells of the original tumour, so these five have been pinpointed as culprits in starting the cancer in the first place — something never been done before.

This and other breakthroughs herald the era of customized treatments. Instead of treating all breast cancer tumours in the same way, doctors are now using treatments that curtail the action of enzymes that help an exact type of cancer to grow. Already, two customized therapies are available: Tamoxifen and Herceptin, with more in the pipeline. METRO

News in brief

Dense breasts = higher risk

STUDY. A 2007 Harvard University study points out several factors that put women at higher risk for breast cancer.

For instance, the risk of developing breast cancer after menopause is 400 per cent higher in women who have dense breast tissue, compared to women whose breast tissue is not dense.

While it's important for all women over 50 to have their breasts checked regularly, those with dense breasts should be watched very carefully.

Factors that may protect against breast cancer include having more pregnancies and breast feeding for longer periods. CELIA MILNE

"The worst part is losing your hair."

"My mother and sister got cancer at 42, so I made sure to go for regular mammograms. Sure enough, when I was 42 the doctors discovered a lump in my breast.

I told the doctors they could take my breasts if they needed to, but in the end they only needed to remove the lumps. Still, I needed surgery, chemotherapy and radiation. Inevitably, I lost my hair.

When you're diagnosed with breast cancer, you go through a depression, but the worst part was losing my hair.

When I looked at myself in the mirror, I looked sick. I used to have really long hair, past my butt. When I lost it, I tried to wear a wig, but it was so itchy that I stopped.

If you go for regular mammograms you can detect the cancer early and have very good chances of recovering. Listen to all the options the doctors give you, but don't be scared.

The only thing you should be scared of is not having a mammogram."

Jamie Currier

"My husband found a lump."

"One day last year, my husband and I were watching TV and saw a news program about self-examinations. My husband asked if he could do one on me, which I thought was amusing, especially since I was only 29. But he did, and he found a lump.

I had a bilateral mastectomy. It was an incredibly difficult decision because I liked my breasts and didn't want to let them go. Before the operation, I arranged for a professional photographer to come and take photos of me so I'd be able to remember what I looked like before the cancer. I'm proud of myself that I had the courage to do that.

I thought having breast cancer would be easier than it turned out. The physical part was about what I expected, but the psychological part was harder.

People expect you to behave a certain way. Some expected me to cry all the time, while others thought I was too sad. My husband was incredibly supportive, but we had our struggles.

Fortunately he agreed to go to therapy with me. Today, the tumour is gone and doctors tell me it only has a small chance of returning. I feel like a survivor."

Angela Chester

"I mourn the loss of my breasts."

"One day while taking a shower, I felt something in my breast that wasn't supposed to be there. When I went to the doctor, he told me I had cancer. In a way, it was a relief that the knot was something — it wasn't just me being crazy.

I had chemotherapy, radiation and breast-reduction surgery. The doctors had to remove the tumour in my right breast, but they had to reduce my left breast, too, so it wouldn't look strange. I went from being a DD-cup to being a B-cup. I'm happy to be alive, but I do mourn the loss of my breasts. It's my skin and tissue, but this isn't the way God made them.

My surgery was in November last year. People sobbed as if I'd died. I think it made them think about their own mortality. My husband kept telling me 'We're in this together. I won't leave you.' Many breast cancer patients worry about their husbands leaving them. Having breast cancer has changed my world. I've learned just to look two to three days ahead. And I've learned not to worry about things I can't change. These days I don't get angry when I'm stuck in traffic."

Allison Briggs

"You're not alone."

"I found a lump and went to the doctor. The doctor told me it was probably cancer, but I delayed getting a biopsy. This was five years ago. I was only 25 and it didn't make sense to me that I'd have cancer. Then I discovered another lump. I had chemotherapy, and the doctors advised me to have both of my breasts removed.

That was a really, really, really hard decision for me. For the first year I wasn't too upset, but when I started dating again it became much harder. Fortunately, when I met my boyfriend, who's now my fiancé, he said 'Ali, it's not a big deal.' Having lost my breasts still affects me, but now I've accepted that it's part of who I am.

When I got cancer my sister, who was living with her boyfriend, simply got on a plane and moved in with me. She took care of me, cooked for me and took me for walks. More importantly, she came with me to every medical appointment and spoke on my behalf when I was too emotional to talk.

As a young breast cancer patient you feel alone, because you feel that your peers don't relate to you. But you're not alone. One thing I want to tell people is that early detection is a matter of life and death."

Contador puts blame on meat

- Tour de France winner says filet mignon caused him to fail drug test
- Tiny amount of banned substance was found in his urine samples

JASPER JUINEN/GETTY IMAGES

▶ Alberto Contador is surrounded by media at the start of his press conference on Thursday.

Alberto Contador blamed it all on a bad piece of filet mignon, and promised he would prevail in the end.

The three-time Tour de France winner said contaminated meat caused his positive doping test for a "very small concentration" of the banned substance clenbuterol. It was found in his urine sample on July 21 at the Tour, according to the International Cycling Union, the sport's governing body.

"The idea of anyone questioning my Tour victory does not worry me," the Spanish cyclist said. "I am not going to let something like this destroy everything I have done."

He was provisionally suspended after a World Anti-Doping Agency lab in Germany determined both A and B samples were positive.

The UCI said the amount of clenbuterol in Contador's sample was "400 time(s) less than what the antidoping laboratories accredited by WADA must be able to detect."

Speaking at a news conference in his hometown near Madrid, Contador said, "I think this is going to be resolved in a clear way. With the truth behind you, you can speak loud and clear, and I am confident justice will prevail."

Contador said the beef was brought across the border from Spain to France by a Spanish cycling organizer, Jose Luis Lopez Cerron, during a Tour rest day and at the request of the team's chef. Cerron said earlier Thursday on Spanish radio that he was a friend of the chef, who had complained of poor-quality meat at the hotel where the team was staying.

Cerron said he bought filet mignon for the team in the Spanish border town of Irun on his way to Pau, France.

Clenbuterol is sometimes given to cows, pigs and other animals to increase their growth rate.

Contador said he and four other Astana teammates ate the beef on July 20 and that he was the only one who underwent a doping test on July 21. He ate more of the meat that day, explaining that although it wasn't normal to eat steak a day before racing, it was too good to waste.

Woods will go third at Ryder Cup

U.S. captain Corey Pavin called on one of his strongest teams to lead off his team's defence of the Ryder Cup.

Tiger Woods? He'll be going third.

Phil Mickelson and Dustin Johnson, famous for their big-money games they play during practice rounds, will be the opening fourballs match Friday at Celtic Manor as the United States tries to win the Ryder Cup away from home for the first time since 1993.

They will face Europe's best player, Lee Westwood, and its latest major champion, Martin Kaymer.

Woods, who has gone nearly 10 months without a victory, will be partners with Steve Stricker in the third of four matches. They will face Ian Poulter and Ross Fisher, one of six rookies on the European side.

It's the first time since 1999 that Woods was not in the opening match of the Ryder Cup.

European captain Colin Montgomerie was expecting Woods and Stricker in either the opening match or as the anchor.

"Tiger being hidden is a different move," he said.

Pavin did not go into details on the nature of his pairings or the order, saying he cared only about the American team and not what Montgomerie might do.

Woods and Stricker make for a natural partnership. A year ago at the Presidents Cup, they became the first team in 30 years to go 4-0 in cup competition. They will take on one of Europe's most passionate players in Poulter, who once said that when he reaches his potential, it will be just he and Woods atop the world ranking.

Today's horoscope

For today's crossword answers and for expanded horoscopes, go to metronews.ca

♈ Aries March 21-April 20 If someone criticizes you for no good reason today you must defend yourself vigorously. Besides, you are well aware what your faults and failings are, you don't need some know-it-all pointing out the obvious to you.

♉ Taurus April 21-May 21 The more you commit yourself today the more likely it is you will enjoy a carefree weekend.

♊ Gemini May 22-June 21 Someone in a position of authority will try to persuade you to change the way you do things today, and you must resist with all your might.

♋ Cancer June 22-July 22 Your ability to see emotional conflicts from both sides will help defuse a potentially explosive situation today. Because you have no personal stake in the affair others will trust you to be fair.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug.23 If you are on the move today you would be wise to think ahead and make allowances for unexpected delays. If you leave anything to chance you are likely to find yourself arriving late for a date

♍ Virgo Aug. 24- Sept. 22 What happens today will ease your fears about your money situation. A windfall is possible but more likely you will realize that the amount of cash in your pocket isn't that important. It certainly isn't more important than love.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23 Today's Sun-Saturn union will limit your options and force you to follow a single path to your goal, and that's good.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22 If your sixth sense tells you that the information you have received from a friend or work colleague cannot be trusted then you would be wise to ignore it.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21 You may not be much in the mood for social activities today but that's okay. You have a great deal on your mind at the moment and you won't be back to your old self until you have dealt with it all.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 20 Now is the time to make your move on the work front. Now is the time to impress employers and other important people with your ideas and talents.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 21-Feb. 18 Generally speaking you have never been one to live by rules and regulations, but with Saturn so strong in your chart at the moment it might be wise not to be quite such a rebel.

♓ Pisces Feb. 19-March 20 If you are a typical Pisces you don't much care for materialistic values but today you must look out for the dollars and cents. If you're wasteful you'll regret it later on in the month.
